China RoHS Compliance Statement

RAF Electronic Hardware has been monitoring the product related environmental legislation activities in China and is fully aware of the labeling law (SJ/T 11364-2006) signed into force by the Ministry of Industry and Information Technology (MIIT) of the Chinese government. The statute sets forth the requirements for labeling all electronic information products sold in China.

Under Section 4 (General Rules), the law states that “for electronic information products purchased for use as components in production, it is fine for the supplier not to perform the markings on provided product.” As a supplier of components that are used in production, RAF Electronic will comply with the law and therefore has no plans to provide labeling on our products.

Section 4 of the law continues with, “but the supplier must provide the purchaser with all the information needed for marking.” Upon request, RAF Electronic Hardware will provide the Customer the information they need to fill out hazardous substance tables for their products.
